

Citizens Against Mandatory Vaccinations

We, the undersigned, assert that mandatory vaccinations are in violation of:

- Our God-given rights of bodily integrity and self autonomy.
- The fundamental human right to determine that which one allows, or doesn't allow, into oneself and one's child.
- The Constitutionally protected and guaranteed right for parents to direct the upbringing and care of their children as they deem fit and right.
- The First Amendment protected and guaranteed freedom to exercise one's religion without government interference or prejudice.
- The ethical practice of medicine, whose hallmark is that of prior, completely voluntary, and fully informed consent. Informed consent requires a formal opting in, never a formal opting out.
- The Hippocratic Oath, which states that doctors and nurses shall "First, do no harm."
- Several international codes of ethics to which the U.S. is a signer, including the Nuremberg Code, the Declaration of Helsinki, and most recently, the 2005 Declaration on Bioethics and Human Rights at the UNESCO Convention.

Furthermore, we assert that current vaccines have not been tested or approved properly or ethically, either individually, or in the myriad, non-uniform combinations in which they are regularly and routinely administered:

- The scientific gold standard, that of a double-blind, placebo-controlled study, is not used for the testing of vaccine safety or efficacy.
- U.S. regulatory agencies have neglected, and presently refuse, to commission a comparison study comparing the never-vaccinated to those who are fully-vaccinated according to the CDC's recommended vaccination schedule (which expands on a frequent and regular basis). Without such a comparison study, no valid claims about any vaccine's safety or efficacy can be made, nor can any claim be made as to the safety or efficacy of any combination of vaccines, nor can any claim be made as to the safety or efficacy of the CDC's recommended vaccination schedule, be it the CDC's schedule for children (0-18), or the CDC's schedule for adults (over 18).
- Vaccines contain ingredients for which the human body has no need or use, and which are known to cause harm, especially when injected, including: aluminum, mercury, formaldehyde, polysorbate 80, antibiotics, viruses and retroviruses of both human and animal origin, aborted human fetal material, DNA and RNA of both human and animal origin, phenol, stainless steel, tungsten, lead, squalene, endotoxins, glyphosate, sodium borate, food proteins, Triton-X detergent, gelatin, egg proteins, yeast, glass shards, and blood-poisoning bacteria, in addition to toxic chemicals, unidentifiable protein aggregates, nanoparticles, and nanocontaminants not listed as ingredients on package inserts.
- Vaccines are permitted by government regulators to contain ingredients that are not required to be listed, meaning that neither those who administer vaccines nor those who receive them are fully informed as to the contents being injected. This is both unethical and highly dangerous.
- Vaccines are not tested for carcinogenic effects, mutagenic effects, or impairment of fertility, despite containing ingredients that cause cancer, that alter and damage DNA and RNA, and that adversely affect fertility, including causing sterility.
- Vaccines are often not tested on the population for which they are targeted.
- Vaccine companies are permitted to do their own safety and efficacy testing, for very short time periods (e.g. 4 days), using reactive "controls" versus placebo controls, declaring their vaccine products to be safe and effective, without any independent, valid testing required.

Lastly, we assert that mandatory vaccinations force recipients to forever forfeit the following health benefits:

- Permanent, lifelong immunity.
- The ability for mothers to transfer immunity to their children, during critical time periods of development, both in the womb and via breastfeeding.
- The timely and proper development of the immune system.
- The avoidance of vaccine-induced toxicity and inflammation.
- The sanctity and purity of one's blood.
- Protection against certain cancers, both in childhood and later in adulthood.

Due to these indisputable truths, we assert that it is both unlawful and unethical to mandate vaccinations, at any time or for any reason, for any person, age group, or occupation, including for military personnel. Furthermore, declared outbreaks, pandemics, and/or emergencies shall not be deemed as permissible times to legislate vaccine mandates or require vaccines.

Vaccine mandates cannot exist in a free and ethical society.

As such, it is imperative and urgent that vaccine mandates be immediately abolished and forever banned in all 50 states comprising the United States of America.

Signed, in truth and liberty,
